So I Think It's Almost Certainly the Case That Classicists Have Proved that this Nice Tidy Idea that the Way We Read in the Ancient World Was that Loud and the Way Read in One Road Is Individually Secretly Silently Privately but and in Fact I'll Just Quote from Gavrilov Who's One of the Classicists Who's Done a Lot of Work on this Question He Concludes the Phenomena of Reading Itself Is Fundamentally the Same in Modern as in Ancient Culture Cultural Diversity Does Not Exclude an Underlying Unity so He's Basically Saying There's Absolutely no Arguments that the Way People Read in the Ancient World Is Any Different from the Way We Read Now but I Think the Question Is Just because the Practice of Reading May Not Have Changed Other Words the Way We Actually Do It as an Act as an Activity

So He's Basically Saying There's Absolutely no Arguments that the Way People Read in the Ancient World Is Any Different from the Way We Read Now but I Think the Question Is Just because the Practice of Reading May Not Have Changed Other Words the Way We Actually Do It as an Act as an Activity Just because that Hasn't Changed Does that Mean that What We Make of Our Reading Hasn't Changed Surely Not and in a Sense There Are Two Questions Then Well There's the Practice of Reading How You Go about It whether It's Silent or whether It's Out Loud

And It Has Been Read Very Differently There Is a Female Voice in Her Writing in Fragment 16 for Example She Says some Say an Army of Horsemen Summon Army on Foot and some Say a Fleet of Ships Is the Loveliest Sight but I Say It Is Whatever You Desire So There She's Suggesting that You Know Men May Like these Symbols of War He's Attributes of War but Not Women Helen of Troy Is Described by Sappho as Desiring a Man Who Is Not Her Husband and Her Passion Is Presented Is More Reasonable than that of a Man's Four Fleets and Ships Alysus on the Other Hand
